As the Crocker Art Museum’s Director of Education from 2000 – 2004 and 2008 – present, Stacey Shelnut-Hendrick oversees a diverse array of programs designed to engage and serve community members of all ages and interests. Most recently, she has spearheaded the development of a range of new and enhanced public programming—including school and family programs, teacher workshops, art and art history classes, as well as lectures, concerts, and films—to debut in fall 2010 in the expanded Crocker’s new education center and public spaces. Shelnut-Hendrick brings more than 18 years experience in museum education, audience development, and program management to her role at the Crocker. Previously, she served as Executive Director of the Star-Spangled Banner Flag House in Baltimore, and has held positions in education at the Brooklyn Children’s Museum, the Studio Museum in Harlem, the New York State Museum, and the Baltimore Museum of Art, where she co-directed the Visualize a Future community outreach initiative. Shelnut-Hendrick holds a Master of Science degree in Museum Education from Bank Street College of Education, New York, and is a graduate of the Getty’s Museum Management Institute.
